

WARNING TO THE WORLD FROM INSIDE AMERICA

New Orleans, Republican Political Party Sponsored Organized Crime, and the Tipping Point to Unsustainable Civilization

September 14, 2005

by
James Roger Brown
Sociologist
thesociologist@earthlink.net

There is a dynamic relationship between human civilization and objective reality. To ensure the continued existence of an advanced civilization, those in positions of governing authority must manage the scientific and engineering intellectual capacity, economic, and social resources in a manner that ensures the dynamic relationship with objective reality does not become lethal.

This is not a new idea. This is not a liberal idea. The earliest known written manual for professional government management is the Arthashastra, circa 250 BC. Book I, Chapter 19, "The Duties of a King" contains detailed instructions on how the King should spend his time every hour of the day and night. It contains these instructions on the relationship between scientific knowledge and the daily duties of the King, "having been awakened by the sound of trumpets during the sixth part [of the night (morning)], he shall recall to his mind the injunctions of sciences as well as the day's duties."

Kings and government managers two hundred fifty years before the birth of Christ understood that a ruler had to consider what was known about objective reality in the daily processes of governing. In 2005 the United States of America has a Yale educated President who does not understand that government cannot be operated in total disregard of objective reality.

This Yale educated President has failed to grasp one vital lesson from the history classes he attended. The substantial number of ruins from prior civilizations distributed around the world testify to the consequences of governing authorities failing to maintain a nonlethal relationship with objective reality.

Playing political games with the truth derived from analyzing objective reality can get a ruler and the civilization he rules destroyed. To confirm this is true, ask any of the dead bodies floating in the ruins of New Orleans to tell you about their experience. They are all experts on the consequences of hurricane related urban flooding now, thanks to the Bush Administration's Neoconservative designed New Orleans Street School of Urban Flooding Studies. (This and similar Neoconservative direct experience job programs currently in development will greatly benefit graduates because they can achieve full retirement after only one day of work, just like the New Orleans dead alumni. In the Neoconservative world view, society wins, too, because no one has to pay the dead for on-the-job-training or work before they enter forced early retirement with insufficient time to earn retirement benefits. It is a perfect Neoconservative world.)

The entire World, and Western Civilization in particular, must set aside current foreign and domestic distractions and focus on this one fact, the disaster in New Orleans is the product of something much more significant than a failure in the processes of United States government. We are all faced with the failure of a fundamental process of civilization brought about by the assembly of sociopaths referred to as Neoconservatives. These dangerous men and women are collectively afflicted with the sociopath's delusions that neither the limits imposed by objective reality nor the adverse lessons of history apply to them.

Events in New Orleans should be a clear warning to every human being on the face of the Earth that the governing authorities in the United States have failed in their primary duty to manage scientific and engineering intellectual capacity, economic, and social resources to prevent the dynamic relationship with objective reality from becoming lethal. President George W. Bush and his Neoconservative Administration neither give any consideration to the state of scientific knowledge nor give any consideration to the limits on the sustainability of Western Civilization imposed by objective reality. President Bush and members of his Administration believe they can use their positions of authority to create any reality they desire without adverse consequences.

Author Ron Suskind reported the following conversation with a Bush Administration Official:

"In the summer of 2002, after I had written an article in Esquire that the White House didn't like about Bush's former communications director, Karen Hughes, I had a meeting with a senior adviser to Bush. He expressed the White House's displeasure, and then he told me something that at the time I didn't fully comprehend – but which I now believe gets to the very heart of the Bush presidency.

"The aide said that guys like me were 'in what we call the reality-based community,' which he defined as people who 'believe that solutions emerge from your judicious study of discernible reality.' I nodded and murmured something about enlightenment principles and empiricism. He cut me off. 'That's not the way the world really works anymore,' he continued. 'We're an empire now, and when we act, we create our own reality. And while you're studying that reality – judiciously, as you will – we'll act again, creating other new realities, which you can study too, and that's how things will sort out. We're history's actors . . . and you, all of you, will be left to just study what we do.'"

The manifest gross negligence and gross incompetence vividly reported by the news media are collateral consequences of the actual cause of the destruction of New Orleans. Neither President Bush, Vice President Cheney, Karl Rove, nor any other member of the Bush Administration believes that objective science and objective reality actually exist.

The reason the Bush Administration was shocked to a man at the destruction in

New Orleans is that it was literally inconceivable to all of them that any event, natural or man-made, could inconvenience their plans, which ultimately include the hope of manipulating Christ to return as a Neoconservative figurehead to establish as reality the thousand-year reign before Bush leaves office.

None of the sequence of “true” realities they believe they have created contain any inconveniences to their plans. Despite appearing in more than one projection of severe hurricane damage, no one in the entire Bush Neoconservative cadre had any comprehension they would be polling the Republican canoe of state forward through the flooded streets of New Orleans pushing aside bloated bodies rotting in raw sewage. What an image of President Bush to compare with Leutze’s painting of George Washington crossing the Delaware.

Citizens and leaders of other nations of the World had better grasp one thing from what they have seen in New Orleans. President George W. Bush and every member of his administration from the White House to the Pentagon to the Middle East are operating outside the boundaries necessary to sustain Western Civilization. President George W. Bush may very well be the most dangerous man that has ever governed, not because he is truly the most incompetent President to occupy the Oval Office, but because he is a leader who does not recognize the existence of either objective reality or objective science.

The destruction of New Orleans is merely the beginning. Just as with the ignored ecological and engineering reports predicting the destruction of New Orleans by a severe hurricane and the ignored requests for funding of disaster prevention engineering projects, there are other science-based warnings of foreseeable disasters. To point out just one profound example, ground water depletion for farm irrigation will result in the inability to grow crops in areas such as eastern Arkansas where rice is currently the major cash crop. As with New Orleans, the warnings are being ignored.

If all the equally sound scientific and engineering studies were counted that identify life threatening and civilization threatening addressable problems from the county and municipal level to the national level, they would probably run into the hundreds, if not thousands.

No one is constructing the solution to any of these identified problems. As demonstrated in New Orleans, all these known problems are being ignored to our ultimate destruction because the resources to solve the problems are being diverted into Republican political party organized crime enterprises.

George W. Bush is President of a nation which has lost an entire city because a sufficient number of United States citizens, myself included, were so foolish that we elected a sociopathic demon to occupy the White House. Finding it empty, President Bush brought in a legion of fellow Neoconservative sociopathic demons to run amok committing every evil deed they could conceive.

It should be noted, but is irrelevant to what must be done, that President Bush and the Republican Party did not create their political organized crime bureaucracy out of thin air. It is the end result of evolving social and political processes which stretch all the way back to the founding of both the Democratic and Republican Parties.

Neoconservative sociopaths may have driven the United States so far past the tipping point into unsustainable civilization that we may not be able to return to a sustainable existence. To have any chance of doing so, we must set as national policy a commitment to finding the truth for use in decision making and never again allow any party or politician to alter or conceal objective reality-based truth to placate political ideology or the twisted whims of sociopaths.

It is easy to ignore the destructive consequences of either Democratic or Republican Party organized crime enterprises when one occasionally or consistently benefits from them. So many economic and social resources have been diverted to party-sponsored crime enterprises for so long that our lives are at stake. We must end it all now. We must end the denial and ignoring of scientific and engineering reality for the convenience of party organized crime. We must end the diversion of economic and social resources to party sponsored organized crime.

It is not from bias that I point to the Republican Party as the first political organized crime bureaucracy that must be arrested and removed from any further access to government resources and authority. By a fluke of history, Republicans were the Party caught at the New Orleans murder scene with a bloody knife in their hand.

No one forced members of the Republican Party to place a criminal mastermind in the White House as a primary aide to the president. No one forced that criminal mastermind to organize a criminal bureaucracy inside government agencies and programs to divert national resources to Neoconservative projects and already wealthy cronies. They all participated of their own free will and must now be held accountable for murder, manslaughter and wanton destruction of property for two important reasons. They must be made a negative example for anyone in the future who would contemplate doing the same. More importantly, their removal and prosecution are important civilization rights-of-passage that must take place for us to collectively mark the end of any cultural tolerance of political party sponsored and managed organized crime.

Every national leader and citizen on earth must understand that until President George W. Bush leaves the White House at the end of his term he will have the capacity and incapacity to take Western Civilization down with him. Prudent national leaders and citizens must prepare military and intelligence contingencies to deal with President George W. Bush and his fellow Neoconservative sociopaths as you dealt with the last band of sociopaths who committed crimes against world civilization. The sociopaths currently controlling America plan to attack Iran, and possibly Syria, with nuclear weapons because it is the only comprehensive offensive military capability they have left as an option. Even after New Orleans, these sociopaths still believe that no adverse consequences from such an act of barbarism can touch them.

If the citizens and government officials of the United States are unwilling or unable to control the incapacity of President Bush and his Neoconservative cadre, it will fall upon you to deal with them.

Neoconservatism, like its arrogant cousins National Socialism and Communism, is now a philosophy of government that is a proven failure. Minimalism may produce interesting art, but, used as dogma in government decision making with total disregard for objective reality, it is a proven failure in New Orleans flood protection and a war of conquest in Iraq. Spending one hundred billion dollars for disaster operations caused by saving one hundred million dollars in Corps of Engineer operations costs is proof of failure beyond any reasonable doubt. Spending $1,000 in disaster relief to save $1 in disaster prevention is a textbook example of false economy.

The World cannot afford to wait for a third confirming historical event. Neoconservatism is like the train in Steven Spielberg's "War of the Worlds," still rolling down the tracks but a flaming ruin from engine to caboose. Republicans blinded by party loyalty are still purchasing tickets to board the burning rolling train wreck of Neoconservatism.

As did the citizens of Germany who placed Hitler in power, we Americans will have to live out the consequences of our collective stupidity in putting President George W. Bush and his fellow Neoconservatives sociopaths into power.

You do not.

If you act prudently and act collectively you can limit the damages you sustain. Do whatever you must to insulate and protect yourselves from these Neoconservative sociopaths until they are displaced from power in the United States.

© Copyright September 14, 2005 by James Roger Brown. All United States and International rights reserved.

James Roger Brown is a sociologist specializing in the sociology of knowledge and intelligence collection and analysis methodology with specific expertise at detecting and documenting organized crime in government agencies and programs. He developed the paired contradictory hypothesis testing evidence analysis protocol from CIA methodology. He is author of The Holographic Paradigm Theory of Social Processes, The Essential Skills of Critical Thinking, the Congressional Evidence Book Compendium of Organized Crime Methods and Procedures Integrated into the Child Protection, Mental Health, and Social Work Systems, and the science fiction series Intelligence Reports From Earth. His web site is at <http://www.thesociologycenter.com/>